Figure 1: A schematic diagram of the experimental setup for the 1D Ising model. It shows a chain of N spins, each represented by a red circle with a dot. The spins are coupled to their nearest neighbors by horizontal lines. The system is initialized in a state where all spins are up (indicated by red dots). The system is then evolved for a time t , and the final state is measured. The measurement results are shown as a histogram of the number of up spins, with a peak at $N/2$. The histogram is labeled "Histogram of the number of up spins" and "Histogram of the number of down spins".

Figure 1. The effect of the number of trials on the number of correct responses. The number of correct responses was significantly higher than the number of incorrect responses in all cases. The number of correct responses was significantly higher than the number of incorrect responses in all cases. The number of correct responses was significantly higher than the number of incorrect responses in all cases.
